Council sets parcel rate to fund regional radio system

by Lindy Magner

Monday, the county Local Agency Formation Commission (LAFCO) will hold a public hearing on the creation of a parcel assessment district to fund a regional communications system which nine cities countywide have agreed to join.

For that hearing, cities which have agreed to join the County Service Area (CSA) as a way to fund their participation in the regional 800-megahertz system, must submit the amount they plan to charge per single-family dwelling parcel.

Approximately $29.6 million of the more than $83 million in total costs will be funded through the CSA, with county general fund monies utilized to fund much of the remaining costs.

Though the county Department of Information Services will submit a uniform base rate for participating cities, each city can assess additional charges for equipment purchases and associated costs. The base rate - though estimated at $7 several months ago - is now at $6.02 after some fine-tuning, according to county Director of Information Services John Fullinwider.

At its Sept. 27 workshop meeting, the Lemon Grove City Council approved an assessment (per single-family dwelling unit) of $29.61, following the city manager's recommendation to utilize the CSA to fund the city's share of costs for Heartland Communications Facility Authority's services and equipment, purchase new radio equipment for the city's fire department (older radios will be passed on to the city's public works department) and bear the additional costs of the city's law enforcement contract with the county.

According to City Manager Doug Yount, utilizing the CSA to fund law enforcement and fire-related costs which have traditionally been funded with the city's general fund monies, will allow the city to buy itself more services. Those communication costs, at $198,000 this fiscal year, are predicted to escalate to $246,300 for fiscal year 1995-96, Yount explained.

"I want to maximize our general fund revenues for services such as law enforcement, recreation, etc. I see law enforcement and other needs increasing," Yount said.

If Heartland agrees to join the county regional system - an item the Heartland Communications Facility Authority will consider

Oct. 13 - the eight jurisdictions which comprise the authority will begin receiving financial credit from the county in 1997, as the county purchases the authority's transmitter equipment.

With Mayor Bob Burns out of town, the council approved the staff-recommended CSA amount. Though Councilman Craig Lake expressed concerns about the legality of utilizing the CSA to fund "current services" as well as improvements, he eventually made the motion that council adopt staff's recommendations.

Also, the council approved the county's revised structure of the advisory board which will oversee the operation of the communications system. With the revision, each participating agency will be represented by one voting member. Before the modification, the advisory board did not include city representatives among its voting membership, but only fire and law enforcement representatives.

According to Fullinwider, the advisory board of about 38 members may find itself too large to function efficiently and may need to form subcommittees which would address specific issues.

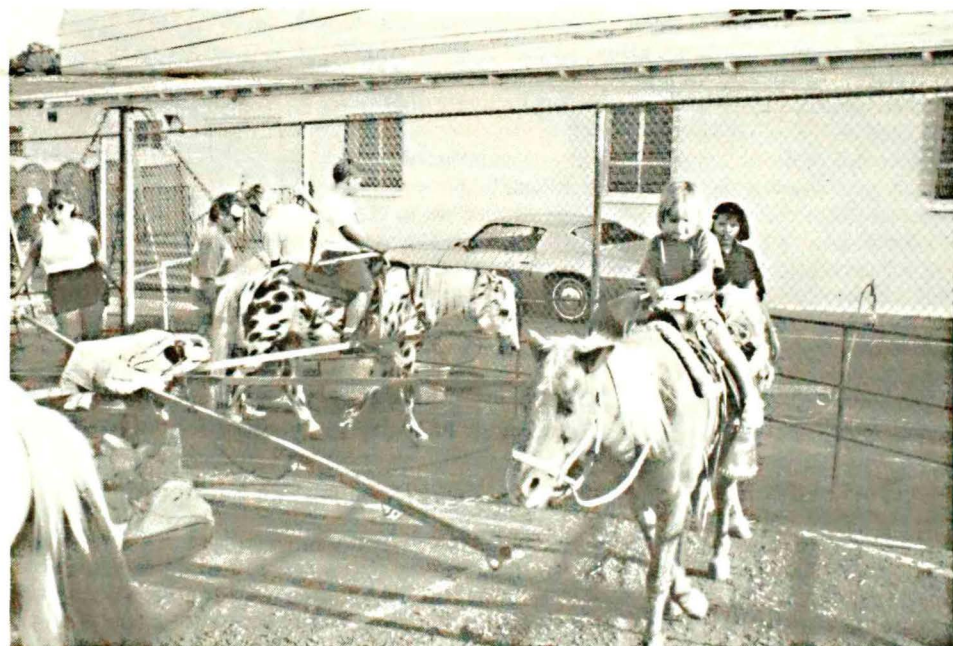

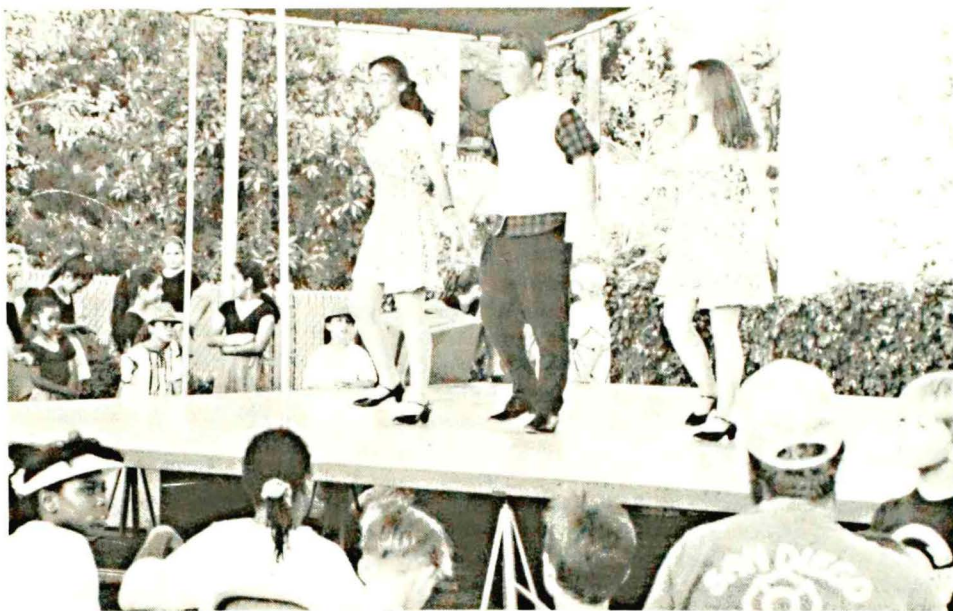

Lastly, the council reconfirmed its direction to its Heartland Communications Facility representative to vote in favor of Heartland's inclusion in the county's communications system.

In anticipation of the authority's Oct. 13 vote which is expected to put Heartland into the regional system, the Heartland board has been negotiating with the county to develop a way in which those cities which belong to Heartland but do not want to be part of the county regional system, can stay free of the system if Heartland as an entity joins.

"Last week, there was a negotiating session between myself and county staff, and we reached a tentative solution which I will be briefing the other fire chiefs about," said La Mesa Fire Chief Chris Carlson, president of Heartland's board of directors. Carlson said the tentative agreement involves trade-offs, with the county receiving the use of Heartland's Rattlesnake Mountain transmission site as well as the co-licensing of Heartland's radio frequencies.

Without the tentative agreement, cities such as El Cajon and La Mesa could be forced to join the regional system as a result of Heartland's participation, and spend millions upgrading fire and police departments in order to access the new system.

SANDAG urges new plans to stop sprawl

by Steven Saint

In 10 years, San Diego will either be a congested, polluted urban sprawl with insufficient housing for its population or a clean, transit-centered network of urban clusters surrounded by open space.

Those are the choices held out in the recently released growth forecast and land use distribution study prepared by the San Diego Association of Governments (SANDAG).

In a document to be reviewed by the county and cities, SANDAG warns that without immediate planning and zoning changes across the county, the land currently zoned for residences will be insufficient for the population expected by the year 2005. Clean air and open space for both humans and animals will be severely endangered.

Writing to El Cajon Planning Director Jim Griffin, SANDAG's executive director said that for the first time, local community plans will not accommodate projected population growth.

"In the year 2005, only 14,000 vacant urban residential acres will remain in the region," wrote Kenneth Sulzer.

"All of this land and more is needed to accommodate the region's forecasted growth."

SANDAG's warning is followed by several planning strategies, all of which would cluster density in existing urban areas and link them with improved transit systems. The strategies include:

- mixing residential and commercial development so that people can better walk to work, shopping areas and recreation.
- developing around mass transit corridors, not outlying open space.
- planning communities to aid walking and bicycling and discourage single-occupant automobile use
- expanding rail transit
- passing the social and environmental costs of automobile travel on to drivers in fees

Cities have until Nov. 18 to make formal comments to SANDAG.

Drummer part of winning corps

Mount Miguel High School graduate Derek De Fields was one of the drummers who contributed to the winning season of the Blue Devils Drum & Bugle Corps, a Concord-based international corps open to youths ages 15 to 21.

The Blue Devils placed first in every competition, capping its summer touring season by winning the Drum Corps International World Championship held in Boston last month. The drum line was also judged separately, and took first place.

A snare drummer, the 20-year-old De Fields has been living in Berkeley, Calif. for two years in order to be close to Concord and part of the Blue Devils.

Before he was selected for the Devils through an audition process, he was part of another drum corps, the Freelancers.

In Berkeley, De Fields works as a production assistant in a clothing factory.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald De Fields of Lemon Grove.

Fire Dept. to host open house, safety fair, breakfast

On Oct. 8, the Lemon Grove Fire Department will host its annual open house and safety fair from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the station, 7853 Central Ave.

The firefighters' pancake breakfast will precede the open house, from 7:30 to 10:30 a.m. The all-you-can-eat breakfast is $3.

The open house and safety fair will feature displays of fire apparatus, fire-safety stickers, brochures, balloons, free blood-pressure checks, a Red Cross puppet show and refreshments.

Representatives from the Sheriff's Department, the Sheriff's Search and Rescue Unit (complete with search and rescue-trained dogs) MADD, Trauma Intervention Program (TIP), Hartson's ambulance service and the Burn Institute will also be on hand.

The event coincides with fire prevention week, Oct. 9 to 15. During that week, the fire department will conduct school fire-safety inspections and fire drills in all local schools, as well as host class visits to the station.

Sweater Saturday hopes for repeat of last year's pile up

This Saturday, Oct. 1, has been designated as collection day for Sweater Saturday, an event developed by SDG&E and co-sponsored by Vons stores.

This year other businesses have also lent their sponsorship.

As it did last year, the city of Lemon Grove is again joining with local service clubs in support of the event.

The aim of Sweater Saturday is to collect useable sweaters and sweatshirts to be distributed to families in crisis, including the homeless, children, elderly and others in need during the upcoming winter season.

Residents can drop off sweaters or sweatshirts at Lemon Grove City Hall, 3232 Main St., Lemon Grove, between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. City volunteers, including some city staff and council members, will be there to help collect sweaters.

Last year's event surpassed its goal of 100,000 sweaters, with more than 300,000 collected. This year's goal is 250,000.

GTM center to get facelift

Tuesday, acting as the city's Redevelopment Agency, the City Council approved in concept a $25,000 grant for facade improvements to the GTM and Clothworld building, 7663-65 Broadway.

According to City Manager Doug Yount, the commercial rehabilitation guidelines adopted by the Redevelopment Agency in 1987 to provide businesses in a specified target area with grants up to $25,000 to fund structural improvements.

The target area includes Broadway from Buena Vista Avenue to Grove/Kempf streets, and Lemon Grove Avenue from Pacific Avenue to Lemon Grove Way.

"Normally, these grants fund up to 50 percent of a business' improvements," he said, adding that nearly 50 businesses in the target area have already taken advantage of the program.

In receiving grants, business owners agree to maintain the improvements for at least five years, Yount said.

Dan Cornell, president of GTM and a member of the limited partnership which owns the GTM/Clothworld shopping center, expects the facade improvements to be an enhancement which will increase GTM sales by 20 percent and Clothworld sales by 12 percent. Remodeling will be done in a Spanish motif.

The total cost of the improvements will be $76,925. Cornell will begin improvements shortly, anticipating completion within 50 to 60 days, hopefully before the Thanksgiving holiday. Both stores are expected to remain open during construction.

GTM moved to its current location in 1992, taking over the former San Lorenzo Nursery building, constructed in 1954.

B-Words At the movies

For what it's worth, my wife and I recently enjoyed "The Little Rascals." It is certainly best if viewed with the younger grandchildren. They will laugh and be thrilled with the antics as Gram and Gramp did when the rascals were called "Our Gang," way back when.

Oh to be young again and to vicariously be a part of the care-free world of children with their clubhouses, homemade race cars, and a dog named Pete, of course.

The casting of this film must have been difficult. To find such duplicates of Spanky, Darla, Alfalfa and Butch is something like miraculous. Stymie and Buckwheat were also clones of those characters who linger in my memory. Modern, special effects took some liberties, but they also did some fantastic things in the original short subjects. Where the original kids did have the typical mix of permanent and baby teeth, I am sure that they exaggerated the difference in size in this present-day movie. It made just the right touch to their smiles and grimaces. But no special effects were needed to capture the voices and expressions that can only originate from a child. The eyes are just so naturally expressive that the few stumbles in dialogue were more darling than gaffs.

The inclusion, very surreptitiously, of some famous names and faces, added a cute touch to the picture. I am sure that they enjoyed being in the film more than the kids did, and it showed. There was a glow, a warmth and a pure feeling of enjoyment in everyone in the cast, and it was not "acting," believe me.

To see people like Donald Trump, Reba McIntyre and Mel Brooks be the decidedly non-stars of a production, you have to know that it was a labor of love, not money. I salute them for it. For pure enjoyment, Jackie and I recommend "The Little Rascals."

In these extremely hot days of summer, we have often resorted to going to the movies to escape the heat. It is fortunate that there are a lot of good movies presently, as described by other reviewers. We seem to have feast or famine in that respect, but I do believe that "movies are better than ever."

Our senior status is an incentive, what with the senior rates for admission, but we still do enjoy seeing a film in a theater. We just haven't gotten into the video film habit, and prefer the darkened atmosphere of a theater. Our first-born used to say, when we were viewing a film at a drive in, "I want to go up there into that place," as if it were a doorway that he could go through. I guess that is what made him take up the profession of acting; and he actually did it, after all.

A couple of "oldies," Bob and Jackie, say go to see the "Little Rascals," if you can. It will be déjà vu, all over again.

Commentary

by Paul Treske

The specter of Willie Horton has risen again in California and it makes me sick to my stomach.

You remember Willie Horton; he was a Massachusetts prisoner who, on a special release program attributed to then-Governor Mike Dukakis, raped and killed a woman.

In his 1988 presidential campaign, George Bush used endless ads, both in print and on TV, tying Dukakis to Horton (and especially stressing Horton's blackness). It was a classic fear ad, using rather remote guilt by association - and it worked!

Now, in 1994, both the Wilson and Huffington campaigns have fallen back on this type of cheap (and irrelevant) shot to score points in their respective races.

Pete Wilson, sensing the tide turning toward him on the illegal immigration issue (and its dark-faced targets), has recalled that fine, old scapegoat, Rose Bird, in his latest ads. Connecting Katherine Brown to her maverick brother Jerry (he's actually opposed to her campaign), Wilson's ads then complete their triple play by connecting the former governor with once Chief Justice Rose Bird and her opposition to the death penalty. A classic guilt-by-remote-association.

Guilt by association

Actually Wilson's ad-makers are to be congratulated. The ads are totally transparent, irrelevant, and classless - and they will work wonderfully well.

The Huffington full-page newspaper ads are even closer to the Willie Horton classic. They describe a particularly gory murder by a particularly brutal murderer and then tell of a judge who commuted the murderer's death sentence.

The connection is then completed by noting that Dianne Feinstein twice voted for the judge. It summarizes by declaring Feinstein "soft on crime" (how many times do we have to hear this baloney before regurgitating?) and outlines Feinstein's votes while on the California Parole Board to release numerous felons. Of course that's what a parole board does, hoping that its judgment is reasonably good. The ad ends by tossing in Rose Bird (remember her?) for good measure, even though she had little to do with Feinstein.

The awful part of all of this is that it works. It always has and it always will. Years ago Los Angeles Mayor Sam Yorty used this kind of thing to defeat Tom Bradley in a mayoral race. Yorty scared the daylight out of San Fernando Valley residents by tying Bradley to the Black Panthers and warning that a vote for Bradley would loose the Panthers upon them; this despite the obvious fact that Tom Bradley was a high-ranking Los Angeles police officer. Nevertheless, Yorty won with ease.

California politics in 1994 already smacks enough of not-so-subtle ethnic fear-mongering without lowering its level still further with ad campaigns like this. Unfortunately there is still a month to go and with these ads working (Wilson is forging steadily ahead and the do-nothing Texan, Huffington, has caught his opponent in the latest polls) we can expect more - much more - of the same.

Guilt by association is as old as time, and has always been the last-resort weapon of scoundrels. Of course, we're the ultimate fools - if we believe it.

PG Perspectives

Buts

by Phillip Giannangeli

There certainly are a lot of butts out there! Some don't amount to very much, but there are a significant number which do get people's attention. And, there are those butts that are just way too big to ignore.

Now just in case anyone thinks that I don't know my butt from a well, you know what I mean, let me explain. I'm talking about the conjunction but, not the posterior butt. That should clarify it for those spellers among you.

The other day I saw this politician doing the typical political dance around a difficult issue and at a critical point in the debate, she decided it was time to put her finely honed but into play. Posturing and playing to the crowd with well-rehearsed sincerity, she thrust her but right into the heated discussion.

"I know this issue is of vital importance to all of you and I can understand how some people of goodwill support it, BUT ..." She then went on to point out how this audience of purported goodwill, totally unaware of their lack of knowledge on the intricacies of such a complex issue, would be wise to let her and her all-knowing political friends decide on what was best. How's that for using one's but skillfully! Politicians are probably some of the best but-users around, but the are by no means out there alone. Those of you who have a spouse or teenage children probably know what I mean.

The use of but has become so common, it's like waiting for the other shoe to drop in some ill-disguised ruse. The person seems to be agreeing with you (leading you on very cleverly), but (ah ha!) you know that it's just a matter of time (usually not very long) before you hear the thud of a but plopping right in front of you. That but-using hypocrite probably never intended agreeing with you in the first place; he was just stringing you along thinking you'd never notice where he was taking you.

When it comes to the little butts in life, it's not hard to ignore them because the inconsequential change in direction isn't earthshaking. It's the big butts that are bothersome or worse.

Example: "You are absolutely perfect for the _____ (fill in the blank with something you missed out on), BUT we decided to go with _____ (fill in the blank with the name of the unworthy recipient of what rightfully should have been yours) instead." That's one of those big BUTS that can really hurt. And even if we know that butts do come along, we're never quite ready for those big ones. "We were going to include you in the purchase of the gang's winning $20 million Lotto ticket, BUT ..."

As I said at the beginning, there are a lot of butts out there. We just have to learn to deal with them. Sometimes a but is not much of a bother. Other times, they fall right into the common phraseology about being a real pain in the posterior.

I'd really like to carry this exposition a little further, but ...

Letters to the editor

Dear Editor:

An article in the Sept. 15, Lemon Grove Review tells us that the City Council of the city of Lemon Grove is considering the merger of Lemon Grove and La Mesa fire departments. They should stop expending funds to Hughes, Heiss & Associates to study a system which "ain't broke" as expressed by Councilman Tom Clabby. La Mesa is the city which needs financial help for its fire department - not Lemon Grove.

Lemon Grove Mayor Bob Burns' article in the same issue of the paper included his statement that he did not have enough information to say the concept has merit. If Mayor Burns asks the people of Lemon Grove, he will soon learn that the plan has NO MERIT!

The City Council should be attending to a more important problem - trash solutions. Mayor Bob Burns did a good job of explaining the trash problems and projected solutions in his "B-Words" comments. Two items bothered me a great deal. One, where are the very large plastic containers going to be situated? Lemon Grove does not have alleys in its residential areas as many cities do. Two, EDCO was quoted as saying that savings in labor will pay for new trucks. More Lemon Grove working people losing their jobs! EDCO's "savings" will probably pay for new trucks AND IMPROVE THEIR "bottom line" which you can be sure is foremost in their thoughts.

Sherman H. Johnson

Dear Editor:

The weekly long article "Mt Miguel El Trovador News Briefs" is a tribute and pleasure for all of the Lemon Grove young people who attend Mt. Miguel High School.

There are many Lemon Grove high school students who attend Helix High School. Could some space also be provided for the Helix Highlanders?

Fair is fair!

Sherman H. Johnson

Mr. Johnson's comments are well-taken. The Review and its sister publications encourage each of the high schools to furnish information of interest to the community. However, over the last five years, Mount Miguel's journalism teacher, Pat Curtis, and the El Trovador staff have consistently done a superior job.

We are pleased to again have the contributions of Danielle White, a Helix student, to keep our readers abreast of Helix happenings.

Helix Happenings

Club Activities:

The Oceanography Club went to La Jolla Shores on Saturday, Sept. 23, for a beach clean-up that was sponsored by Sea World, which provided free sodas and ice cream.

On Saturday, Oct. 1, Interact Club along with clubs such as Key Club and ASB, will be at Vons for "Sweater Saturday," a countywide activity that collects sweaters, sweatshirts, baby clothes, and other miscellaneous items to help the homeless. Bring by some sweaters that you have lying there in your closets that haven't been worn since that spring picnic two years ago! Giving makes each party feel special!

The Grand Opening of Helix's "Second Chance Shoppe" PTSA Thrift Store! On Tuesday and Thursday during lunch. Gather up 50 cents and see what we have, that will suit your fancy!

Reminders:

Back to School Night! Wednesday at 6 p.m., parents can come and conference with their student's teachers, see what clubs have been planning for the school year, and see what your hard earned tax dollars have done for the school over the past summer. Students are also welcome.

There's no quit in these former San Miguel PTA board members

by Lora Clark

They originally met in the 1950s, when they all served as PTA board members at San Miguel Elementary School.

After working together for several years, some of them moved to nearby communities, their children began attending various schools, and the women went their separate ways. Yet, when they would run into each other, they would inevitably say, "We all ought to get together sometime!"

This went on for almost 30 years until one of the group members decided to do something about it.

"Jo Smith was the one who finally got things going," explained Lillian Collette. "She set a date, and we sent our announcements. Three years ago April, we had our first luncheon at Anthony's Fish Grotto in La Mesa; 13 of the 14 showed up at that first get-together."

"Some of us hadn't seen each other for 20 years," added Smith.

"We stayed around and talked for hours. We enjoyed being with each other so much that we agreed to meet each fifth Wednesday of the month, and that's what we've been doing ever since!"

They originally met to do PTA work for the benefit of their children. Now they meet simply because they enjoy being together. They call themselves the "PTA Leftovers."

The things they remember most fondly about their years of involvement with the PTA are the many long-lasting friendships that were established, the sense of accomplishing something worthwhile, and the camaraderie they felt with others who, like they, were working together to benefit children.

And benefit children they did! Beginning in the mid-1960s and continuing each summer for seven years, the PTA, in cooperation with the Red Cross, sponsored the Backyard Swim Program. Local residents offered the use of their pools.

"My husband and I built our pool with the program in mind," recalled Maxine Grove. "It had a large shallow area, so there'd be plenty of room for the little ones."

Each volunteer instructor was required to pass a Red Cross training program to earn her classification of Water Safety Instructor. She and her assistant would conduct three classes per day, free of charge, with approximately seven children per class.

During the years this program was in operation, 700 Lemon Grove children learned how to swim.

When the Salk and Sabin polio vaccines became available to the public, the PTA cooperated with the County Health Department to provide clinics to dispense the medication. PTA volunteers scheduled appointments, kept records, and helped things run smoothly. This, too, was free, not only to the children, but to their parents, as well.

At the end of each school year, the PTA presented a gift to the school. Trees were donated to enhance the landscaping of the campus, outdoor lighting was upgraded, and lumber was contributed for the carnival booths.

The annual Halloween carnival was the one-and-only fund-raiser for the PTA. Pat Canet recalled her fund-raising experiences.

"When my daughter was in kindergarten," explained Canet, "one of the PTA board members asked me how I would like to help out. I didn't know what I wanted to do, so she suggested that I chair the Ways and Means Committee, which meant planning the carnival. I thought it would be easy since it was only one time per year, so I accepted the position."

It wasn't long before she found out just how UNEasy it was!

"The volunteers would grumble and moan as they worked for hours and hours to get the booths and amusements ready for the children," continued Canet. "They'd say, 'Don't ask me to do this NEXT year!' Yet, after everything was done, and they saw how much fun the children had, they were all there the next year, ready to do it all over again!"

While Canet's memories are of fun-filled, noisy times, June Klimek remembers a scene of quietness.

"I liked being a kindergarten room mother for Winifred Stone," reminisces Klimek. "She never spoke above a whisper. The kids had to listen carefully to hear the instructions she gave. All the kids were so well-behaved!"

Through her 20 years of PTA involvement, Odessa Gagian won many awards for her dedicated service. After serving at the local school level, Gagian held the position of vice president of the 9th district, which included all of San Diego County.

"The most interesting thing I did was in 1968," commented Gagian. "I made all the page outfits - 65 of them - for the PTA state convention. We wore sailor outfits - a pleated skirt and a middy top - and acted as ushers to the 6,000 people who attended the convention. When we were all lined upon the stage during the closing ceremonies, the moderator said, 'Yes, everybody, one person DID make all those outfits!' The audience applauded enthusiastically. It was a very satisfying moment for me."

Another memorable moment occurred in that year when Lillian Collette, who holds an honorary PTA life membership, received the Laurels Award, "given for outstanding contributions to education in the Grossmont District." Each year, five people were selected from the Grossmont District to receive this award, the highest honor given at the district level.

Collette, who served on PTA boards for 20 years, said, "Those were some of the most wonderful years of my life."

During their combined total of 428 years of living in Lemon Grove, these women have served on the PTA boards of most of the schools within the Lemon Grove School District, as well as those of Helix and Mount Miguel high schools.

They were active in the foreign student exchange program, the Lemon Grove Music Parents, and the Music Parents at Helix High School. Many of them devoted their time to bond issues that affected the schools.

Not only have they expended their time, energy, and talents to school-related activities, they have also contributed generously to the community at-large.

They have been Cub Scout den mothers and leaders of Girl Scouts, Brownies, Bluebirds, and Campfire Girls troops. They were active in Little League and Bobby Sox. They have volunteered to work for the Heart Fund and the Registrar of Voters, at food banks and thrift shops. They have contributed their time to the Kiwanians, the Foothills Family Service and Lemon Grove Welfare Service.

And they did all this while raising their own children, as well. Their children - 46 of them - all attended schools in the Lemon Grove School District and are now contributing to the various communities in which they live. Many are in the medical field serving as doctors, nurses, and technicians. Others are teachers, probation officers and police officers. Some are in the business world as financial planners, sales representatives, real estate brokers and office workers. One is the senior keeper at the San Diego Wild Animal Park - another is raising cattle in Minnesota.

And, like the Energizer bunny, they keep going when others quit. Although they have a combined total of 314 years of service, these women are still actively involved in their communities.

Mary Taylor continues to work at San Miguel Elementary School as an instructional aide.

"I've been there since 1966 - longer than anyone else," explained Taylor. "There were 19 aides in the original group. I'm the only one left. I love the atmosphere and the children. It's a joy being there."

Jo Smith directs traffic when the Lemon Grove Middle School band is preparing for the Maytime Band Review that's held in National City.

"A few blocks in Lemon Grove are closed off," commented Smith. "I direct motorists around the band. I'm glad I can do something to help the kids."

Jane Ogden, another one of the group who is still vitally interested in children and education, is a volunteer at the Home of Guiding Hands in Lakeside. She is a substitute teacher for Grossmont Adult School and the Chula Vista School district. She also serves on a scholarship committee at El Capitan High School.

Lois Fyock, who served in the US Navy during WWII, is a member of the American Legion in La Mesa, secretary of the Lemon Grove Woman's Club, and a member of the Grossmont Hospital Auxiliary.

Mary Lou Brumbaugh is also a member of the Grossmont Hospital Auxiliary.

"I was a charter member in 1954 and am now a life member," explained Brumbaugh. "I've also been involved with the San Diego County Medical Auxiliary. The auxiliaries promote the work of medical doctors and inform the public of any legislation concerning health care."

Pat Canet, known as San Diego's own "call girl," teaches and calls square dancing and line dancing.

Many of the women spend much of their time in church-related service. Dolores Hart, a member of Christ United Methodist in San Diego, is one of seven trustees and also serves as Missionary Chairman.

"Our church supports missionaries in Kentucky, Japan, and Africa," explained Hart. "I maintain contact with them and write articles about them for the church newsletter."

"Also, my husband and I visit the sick and shut-in two or three times per month."

Jodie Hattox, member of Lemon Grove First Baptist Church, sings in the church choir and the senior choir, and she assists with a Sunday School class.

"My husband teaches an adult Bible class," explained Hattox. "I help by maintaining contact with the class members during the week and by planning social activities for them in our home."

"A lot of my time is spent with my grandchildren," continued Hattox. "Every Thursday is grandkids day. I pick them up from school and bring them to our house, where we swim or play table games and then have something special for dinner. If school is not in session, I have them all day."

Marge Richards, who has lived in Lemon Grove for 33 years, is no longer involved in service work.

"My husband and I travel a lot," explained Richards. "He was in the Naval Air Corps, and we have, every year for the past 15 years, attended his squadron's reunions, which are usually back East. Also, we enjoy frequent visits with friends and family members, who live in various parts of the United States."
